

RESTAURANTS/DINING OUT

Sydneysiders love to eat out with so many excellent restaurant choices both in the city and suburbs. There is a vast variety of cuisines from all around the world often cooked by people from the place of origin. Given Sydney's proximity to the ocean there is also a large variety of fresh seafood restaurants.

Tipping is generally expected for extra or friendly service, usually 10% to 15%. On the bill there will be a separate amount for GST (Goods and Service Tax) – 10% of the total. There is often a surcharge applied for dining on public holidays and sometimes Sunday's.

Licensed restaurants may have a full bar service, supplying wine, spirits and beer, while unlicensed restaurants, known as 'BYO' (Bring Your Own), allow diners to take their own wine to consume with their meal, a 'corkage' fee is usually but not always charged.

Some areas of Sydney have seasonal cultural food festivals celebrating traditional ethnic cuisines and street food (hawker style) food courts are situated in most of the larger shopping malls. These are very popular places to eat even with non-shoppers. Takeaway and 'Uber Eats/Door Dash/Menulog' home delivery service is very popular too.
